Cultural festivals (???, bunkasai) in Japan are annual open day events held by most schools, from nursery schools to universities at which their students display their artistic achievements. People who want to enter the school themselves or who are interested in the school may come to see what the schoolwork and atmosphere are like.

Japan accepted the UNESCO World Heritage Convention on 30 June 1992. As of July 2018, twenty-two properties have been inscribed on the World Heritage List: seventeen cultural sites and four natural sites. A further eight sites and one site extension have been submitted for future inscription and are currently on the Tentative List as of 2017.
