1904-1905, Russo-Japanese War. The Russo-Japanese War was fought between the Russian Empire and the Japanese Empire from 1904 to 1905. It was the only war fought between two Great Powers since the Napoleonic Wars. The war was fought in Manchuria and the Korean Peninsula. The Japanese emerged as the victor, marking the first time a non-European power had defeated a European Great Power in a conventional war. The war had significant consequences for both nations, leading to the rise of Japan as a world power and the decline of Russian influence in the region.
